It is a widely recognized truth that technological stride has impacted a number of fields, and has improved the overall expedience of our life. More opportunities and choices to gratify desires on certain things have been available, and the field of beauty is not an exception. Not only do the cosmetics can be a component of make-up, but also the surgery can play roles as one of the methods, which is so called the 'cosmetic surgery'. However, cosmetic surgeries also accompany several disadvantageous points. They arouse issues regarding the individuality, discrimination, and risks.

First and foremost, increased demand for cosmetic surgery will end by an ultimate decrease of diversity of individual peculiarity. Each person consisting the modern society possesses dissimilar characteristics, of which representatively include facial and physical appearance. A variety of these features are harmonized with others, forming a distinctive and complicated society. In contrast, the surgery standardizes facial features of both males and females. Most of them will look analogous to each other after the surgery, and the criterion of being beautiful or handsome will be revised. Together, society will become monotonous.

Second of all, discrimination between the rich and poor will be magnified by a great degree through the cosmetic surgery. This method of adorning oneself requires a lot of money for each operations, but facilitates customizing the face with guarantee of highly improved appearance. In reality, the riches are still able to readily access such methods and afford expenses in this method while the poors aren't. As a result, the former group will become dominant in facial appearances. This makes it possible for other people to discern the rich and poor only by a semblance of one person.

Last but not least, the surgery involves a number of hazards for the patients, as well as the doctors. Solutions for unsatisfying results must be in a consideration of the patient, since the surgery still cannot completely guarantee the outcome that the patient has commissioned before the operation. In addition, inflammation or infection caused by detrimental bacteria can severely damage the face.

In conclusion, cosmetic surgery shouldn't be considered to be utilized as one of the methods to make the appearance more beautiful or handsome, owing to its effects regarding the reduction of distinct peculiarities, discrimination, and hazards.
